An arched visual being

At first, I thought it was just simple architecture.

Getting closer to it with my curious awareness (after having dreamed this same sight 3 times this night), it became softer and the white part focused more close-up on me, friendly.

It had 3 parts. The main part is the arched bar at the top, white, and solid yet somewhat soft. (It reminded me of our coconut's colour and consistency.) Under this are two brown, thin but strong, solid supports. And under each of these is a greenish rectangular (with rounded top corners) base. The base receives life-force signals through the planet's surface, and sends impulses back into it.

The whole being acts as a sense-organ for the planet beneath it. (I later wondered if the arched bar also has a long-distance radar function.) There are many of this life-form on the planet.

When i realized that it was a primarily visual being, it confirmed this by creating a picture in my head – a simplified eye with 3 parts- which was purely a symbol for my Earth-culture's understanding (i.e. as a teaching device).

The white of this "eye", the surrounding layer, gives nutrients to it.

There was an iris inside that, which sees.

There was a pupil inside that, which expresses emotions (short-term) and moods (deeper, of more basic origin), plus the most external layer of thoughts, and maybe deeper, more internal layers of consciousness as well.

This eye, which was only a symbol familiar to us, not part of its actual anatomy, was placed in the middle of its white top bar. When I awoke the third time, i quickly imagined that the eye might wink at me from its inner layer, to show amused confirmation of my understanding (if it had been a human, with our gestures), and in my mind its expression then contracted into what we would feel and interpret to be a living, friendly look.
