the simplified steering mechanism

This was a very easy first lesson given to us, to teach us how a UFO maneuvers in space.

We were 4 humans (in our 20's and 30's) from different countries (who each spoke a different language, which the others didn't understand), who sat on simple wood-and-wicker chairs outside and around a stationary demonstration UFO's thin external pole-shaped, thin tower, which could be used for several purposes.

We were allowed to press/pull each our large directional button/lever on the round pole's 4 horizontal sides (this control function was normally inside the column). For demonstration purposes, each of these had a different colour, easily recognizable for human eyes - yellow, red, blue, and another one. Each person could direct the UFO to move in one of the 4 horizontal directions. Our combined simple directing determined its horizontal movement, and something within the UFO's main body underneath us (which we couldn't see into) directed the column in another way, to move the UFO up and down vertically. Put together, this steered the UFO.

Because the lesson was so elementary, when i awoke i assumed the dream was merely symbolic (the chairs were man-made, the buttons coloured, we sat somehow as if in mid-air) and that it therefore came from my own imagination, so i didn't get up to record it. 4 times i slept again, and each time was shown/given deeper details.

After the 5th level, i got up and drew/wrote up this small remembered bit of the sequence, which i think was a simplification of the combined first-and-second pieces of what I dreamed. (The bridge to my awake conscious mind wasn't powerful enough this night to recall the further details.)
