

Dec.8, 1975

Description:

On Dec. 8, 1975, at 7:40 AM, a neighbor passed by then I was alone on the local parking lot, looking at the early beautiful sky with orange light, Venus bright on the far right and a clear airplane flying over there.

All at once a very bright light, larger than any star and almost a medium-distanced airplane's size, lit up while standing still. It was a triangular shape with rounded corners, pointing leftwards.

It then began to move slowly that way, rather like floating, moving only a few degrees across the sky, went into a small grey cloud it's own size, and never re-appeared in the clear sky beyond that.

Total time 1½ seconds.

Subjective after-thoughts:

A UFO, or maybe weird visual effects off an airplane?

It strikes me that nearly always no one else is around, or if so, is looking that way.

A feeling that my evolving questions about UFOs are answered or stimulated further by the differing details of my sightings.
